La Reinese brings Italian artisan heritage to modern food production

Premium pesto, gourmet ready-to-use sauces and antipasti for retail, food service and private label partners.

REINO, Italy - La Reinese combines Italian artisan care with modern production technology to create premium pesto, gourmet ready-to-use sauces and antipasti for retail and food service. Rooted in the culinary traditions of Sannio in southern Italy, the company brings together carefully selected ingredients, traditional recipes and ongoing investment in people and production processes.

Artisan care, modern production

La Reinese's story began in 1990 in the hills of Sannio. Its approach preserves the attention to detail of artisan preparation while continually refining production methods. Hand-filled vegetable specialties exemplify this care, alongside pesto, sauces, vegetable preserves, pâtés and spreads inspired by Mediterranean cuisine. Technology supports this work, helping bring traditional recipes to a wider market.

A partner for retail, food service and private label

Available under the La Reinese brand and through private label production, the portfolio serves retailers, distributors and food service operators. From pesto and sauces for pasta dishes to antipasti and spreads for appetizers, the range combines authentic Italian flavor with the convenience of prepared specialties for home kitchens and professional settings.

Quality supported by certified standards

BRC and IFS food safety certifications underpin the company's commitment to quality. La Reinese also holds organic certification and ISO 14001:2015 certification for its environmental management system. HACCP procedures, ingredient traceability and regular checks on raw materials and packaging support control throughout the production process.

About La Reinese

Based in Reino, in the province of Benevento, La Reinese is an Italian food producer with roots dating back to 1990. It supplies pesto, sauces, antipasti and other preserved specialties to domestic and international markets under its own brand and through private label partnerships.
